

Deputy Commissioner - Development Non-Civil Service Position

The Baltimore City Department of Housing and Community Development is seeking a Deputy Commissioner for our Development Division.

Job Overview

The Deputy Commissioner for Development (DCD) is responsible for developing and executing citywide housing development, revitalization and neighborhood improvement strategies that reflect the vision and goals of the agency and the Mayor. In addition to having a working knowledge of the various public programs and tools available to support the City's housing development agenda, the DCD must be able to coordinate and significantly leverage private lending institutions, real estate developers, non-profit community organizations, and philanthropic organizations in order to achieve the necessary scale of activities necessary for the expected impact. In addition, the DCD must work closely with the Housing Authority, BDC, the Planning Department, and the Mayor's Office of Employment Development to ensure that the full range of services and activities are working in conjunction with one another for the benefit of the City.
