Professional Expertise

Jared Londry is a Director at Cushman & Wakefield, where he specializes in the disposition of office, adaptive re-use, and mixed-use assets across the sunbelt for both institutional and private investors. He joined Cushman & Wakefield in 2013, and has been involved in nearly $3 billion of investment property transactions in his tenure with Cushman & Wakefield.

Prior to joining Cushman & Wakefield, Jared served as a consultant in the fund oversight group at TIAA-CREF and as a financial analyst at Wachovia Securities. He earned his Bachelor's degree in Finance at North Carolina State University, and then went on to earn his Master of Business Administration from the University of Georgia, Terry College of Business. Jared is a licensed real estate broker in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, and also holds the LEED AP credential.
