

Ashley Fahey is the managing editor of The Charlotte Ledger, a local digital media publication that delivers smart, original journalism on Charlotte business news and other topics. She is an award-winning journalist who has covered commercial real estate for more than a decade. Before joining The Ledger in September, Ashley was managing editor of national content at American City Business Journals, where she also authored a newsletter about the national commercial real estate market. Before that, she served as real estate editor and reporter at the Charlotte Business Journal. Ashley is a graduate of Elon University and lives in Commonwealth Park with her husband.