

Christine Loh served as the undersecretary for the environment in the Hong Kong Government from 2012 to 2017. She currently serves as chief development strategist at the Institute for the Environment at Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, as well as teaches an MBA course on non-market risks at UCLA's Anderson School of Management. Loh was the co-founder of Civic Exchange, an independent, non-profit public policy think tank that became internationally recognized, especially in the area of environmental issues. Prior to establishing Civic Exchange, she had a highly successful career in legislative politics from 1992 to 2000.

Loh has been involved with non-governmental organization (NGO) activities ranging from the arts to the environment to urban development to equal opportunity to constitutional reform. She has established various NGOs, as well as served on the boards of and chaired many such organizations. She is well known for her work in designing and facilitating multi-stakeholder dialogue processes to help deepen and broaden understanding on public issues. She currently serves as director and trustee of CDP Worldwide, a London-based organization that runs a global disclosure system for companies, cities, states and regions to manage environmental impacts, and she is a director of the Global Maritime Forum, the Robert H N Ho Family Foundation, as well as a member of BASF's Stakeholder Advisory Council.
