

Rachel MacCleerySenior Vice President, Building Healthy Places, Urban Land Institute

Rachel MacCleery is Senior Vice President at the Urban Land Institute, where she leads the organization's Building Healthy Places Initiative and other programs. Rachel is spearheading ULI's efforts to leverage the power of its global networks to shape projects and places in ways that improve the health of people and communities, through design and programming strategies that increase opportunities for physical activity, social engagement, access to healthy food and nature, and other ingredients of holistically healthy living. Rachel has extensive knowledge of land use, environment and sustainability, social equity, and infrastructure policy and practice issues. Rachel has worked at ULI since 2008 and previously worked for AECOM and the District of Columbia Department of Transportation. She has a Masters Degree in Public Administration and Urban and Regional Planning. She speaks Mandarin Chinese and has lived in China off and on since 1994. She currently lives in Washington, DC.