

Panya Boonsirithum is a social entrepreneur. A Thai national, his parents migrated to the Philippines when he was only 5 years old. Growing up in the Philippines his life journey has exposed him to different fields of work from high fashion to farming and eventually real estate. These diverse experiences showed him great social insights and taught him to think outside the box in dealing with complexities which lead him to project CITIHUB. A social enterprise that converts old shipping containers into living spaces for low income workers. Now he is embarking on a new Social Enterprise, The Family Tree Project.
