

Renae Zelmar is a Planning Assistant with Los Angeles City Planning, where she has played a key role in finalizing the City's comprehensive revision and restructuring of the Zoning Code. Prior to her work with the City, Renae engaged in research on zoning and housing production in Los Angeles and urban development patterns internationally. She is passionate about decentering and improving the accessibility of planning and has worked on a participatory planning pilot project in Mexico City and a neighborhood-directed governance project in Quito, Ecuador. Renae received her Master's degree in Urban and Regional Planning and an M.A. in Latin American Studies from UCLA and her B.A. from Soka University of America.