

ULI Minnesota

Regional Council of Mayors

The Regional Council of Mayors provides a nonpartisan platform focused on building civic trust through relationships, inquiry, partnerships and action.

Research from Gallup shows that confidence and trust in government is at or near historic lows, challenging our ability to create thriving places. At the same time the federal government is pushing more responsibility down to the local level. This puts cities between a rock and a hard place—people mistrust government even as government is asked to do more.

The Regional Council of Mayors (RCM) provides a way forward. As elected officials, mayors are closest to the citizens they serve. Since 2004, the mayor-members of the RCM have created a culture of nonpartisanship rooted in the exchange of ideas and built on trusted relationships. Content expertise shared at RCM meetings fosters informed action and impact as mayors take on issues of regional significance.

The need for the trusted civic infrastructure the RCM provides is greater than ever. ULI Minnesota and the RCM are proud of this important work helping our leaders become more empowered, engaged and hopeful.
