Key Principles:

- "Place" can be permanent or a temporary event
- Inclusivity/open to all
- Indoors or outdoors
- Helps to change perceptions of a place
- Should explain, particularly for an event or temporary place, how it begins to build a narrative around something more transformational/perception-changing and begin to move a place(neighborhood/city) forward.

2022 CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS (continued)

HEALTHY PLACE: This award will recognize the place that promotes activity and social interaction through health-giving and accessible design to improve overall quality of life.

Key Principles:

- May feature spaces that are located indoors, outdoors or a combination of both.
- Applicants should demonstrate as part of the submission materials, the nominated places' ability to:
 1. Activate social interaction among their visitors, users, and the general public, while striving to improve their health and wellness as a primary purpose for existence.
 2. Integrate a strong ecological consideration in the design—either meeting an ecological challenge, protecting an important ecological place, or by effectively demonstrating how humans can utilize natural resources efficiently and responsibly.
 3. Augment the physical well-being of people—through creative programming, encouraging physical activity and/or using innovative health-focused technologies to foster health and wellness.
 4. Describe the 'heart or soul of the place' as perceived by the nominated place's users and what qualities make the place special and/or extraordinary.
- Additional considerations:
 1. The award nominee must have achieved a significant construction or implementation milestone in last 12-18 months (e.g. major renovations, a grand opening, impactful programming).
 2. Applicants should highlight whether the nominated place has achieved certifications relevant to health and wellness (e.g. LEED, Sustainable Sites, Living Building, Well Building, etc...).

VISIONARY PLACE: This award recognizes the vision for a place currently under development promising significant impact on lifestyle and the region.

Key Principles:

- Project is currently under development.
- Project will positively impact lifestyle and/or improve viability of local businesses.
- Local stakeholders were engaged to determine the best placemaking approach to the project.
- Outcomes will address stakeholder's needs.
